A DAY IN THE LIFE OF AN INTERNAL AUDITOR

Internal Auditor Career

As an internal auditor, your responsibilities may include assessing an organization's risk environment and providing best practice operational and control recommendations. Internal auditors at Hancock Askew have the opportunity to collaborate on internal audits, IT audits, and consulting engagements with various types of clients. Today, internal audit is in high demand as public and private companies and governmental entities continue to expand their audit needs in response to corporate reforms, an increase in the transaction (IPO) market and to address growing IT risks.

HAC Risk Assurance and Advisory Group

Our dedicated Risk Assurance and Advisory Group works with management and audit committees of both public and private companies to analyze internal controls and proactively manage enterprise-wide risk management. We examine processes, suggest operational efficiencies and provide technology audits on the systems that affect financial reporting, including an evaluation of possible threats and IT related risks. Career opportunities for our Risk Assurance and Advisory Group typically begin at the internship level and those professionals evolve to full-time staff.

"You First" Company Culture

Our "You First" approach is dedicated to providing an enriching environment to help you reach your full potential. We not only deliver audit, tax, and accounting solutions; but we also provide advisory assistance to help clients reach their goals and overcome challenges. We take the same approach with our employees. We are passionately engaged in what is best for you. The better you become, the stronger our firm becomes.
